Santa Clara 1728

Santa Clara 1728 is an intimate six-suite hotel housed in an 18th century building in the old cultural quarter of Lisbon. This warm, family-style accommodation was created by hotelier João Rodrigues, with design by award-winning architect, Manuel Aires Mateus.

Generous windows allow natural light to spill over the interior spaces, and provide clear views of the Pantheon and Tagus River. Inside, an abundant use of wood and stone brings a sensual tactility to the space, while the design harmoniously combines original features, including stairs and archways, with sensitively applied modern elements.

The hotel feels like a traditional Lisbon house, filled with the natural rhythm and warmth of family life. Guests are invited to relax in the private secluded garden or gather around the communal dining table to enjoy home-cooked meals made from local produce.

The serenity of this modern architecture, rooted in tradition yet transported to current times, with a reverence for nature, history and place, is in keeping with the De La Espada design ethos. Authentic materiality and timeless design come together in a place designed for life and togetherness.
